“ Though time and space had separated us since we were kids, Jimmy was always my best friend ever and I thought of him often. I could write volumes about our exploits when we were of grade school age. I will share this one memory: Heaven forbid that our guy friends knew but, Jimmy and I both liked girls. I mean girls at our age were supposed to be “Yuckie.” As I recall, whenever I had the opportunity and the nerve to speak to one that interested me and out of the sight of my guy friends, of course, they would always want to know all about Jimmy. Alas, they became just another Yuckie girl. Though time and space have separated us in life, the fond memories will live on until I join you in heaven, when again we can speak of Johnny Mack Brown. Until then, if you are so inclined, add me to your list of those to watch over. So long for now my friend and happy trails.
